Dr. & Mrs. William H. Willis,

Reading,

Massachusetts.

Nov. 30, 1908.

My dear ones at home, —

Only two more Sundays shall I write to you in the year 1908! fact think of that! It hardly seems possible that vacation begins two weeks from next Thursday, but it really does.

I got back on Friday afternoon in plenty of time for my class, after a very nice time in town with papa. Friday was a busy day, I can tell you. After my class, I came back here picked up a few things, and dressed for dancing. We had lots of fun at dancing, but, as we don't leave College Hall until quarter of six, it is a good deal of a hustle to get ready for dinner. Then this Friday we had a class meeting at seven, so we just got up from the table, put on caps & gowns & flew to College Hall again. We had a long & interesting meeting, discussing senior examinations and our senior play. We ~~finally~~ finally decided on our play, the play which you will all see next June when you come out for Commencement week. It's a play that has never been given in this country, so far as we know, and we think it's going to be splendid.

Saturday was the day of our senior reception, you know, and to it I escorted two freshmen. I guess the freshmen had a pretty good time, and I wasn't quite as bored as I expected to be. One of my freshmen, Marjorie Sherman, came home to dinner with me. I like her very much. Luckily she didn't wish to go to the Harvest Dance at the Barn, for I certainly didn't want to go.

Now to-day I'm going to work more or less, for I think I shall go to Boston to-morrow afternoon. This is a very stupid letter, I know, but I've been back such a very short time that I haven't much to tell you; I'll try and write again in the middle of the week, a more interesting letter, I hope. Tell mother to take good care of herself & not go to cleaning house again right off. It will very soon be Christmas now, so you'd all better write me some hints for Christmas presents. I need them very much.

With heaps of love to you all, from Ruby.
